Brings Suit Against the Business College Man for Divorce.

Prof. William A. Kissick, proprietor of Kis sick's Business College, at 45, 47 and 49 Ashland place, Brooklyn, is the defendant in suit for limited divorce, brought by his wife-Margaret Kissick, in the Supreme Court. Kissick is well known in Brooklyn and is reputed to be worth $50,000. The couple were married Sept. 19, 1869, and have one son, Robert G. Kissick, who is now twentyone years old. They lived happily together until about three years ago, when, according to Mrs. Kissick's lawyer, the detendant began treating his wife in a cruel manner. Mrs. Kissick alleges that her husband used

She also alleges that Kissick attempted to cut his son with a knife, so that it was necessary to call in a policeman. Before Justice Pratt in Supreme Co

Brooklyn, this morning, Lawyer David F. Butcher applied for an order requiring Kiss-ick to pay his wife $75 a week almony and $500 counsel fees, pending trial of the action. Lawyer Butcher dwelt upon the fact that the defendant was a man of much wealth, and had a large account with the Commercial Bank.

Bank.

Frot. Kissick's lawyer denied the charges made against his client, and said that his property, instead of being worth $50,000, was not worth more than $20,000. He also declared that Kissick's income does not exceed $1.200 a year. declared that Kissick's income does not ex-ceed $1,200 a year.

The trouble between the couple, said the lawyer, arose through the action of Mrs. Kissick'in ordering a temale pupil out of the school. Counsel also declared that Kissick's son was worthless and disobedient and took the side of his mother in the present con-troversy.

Mrs. Kissick's lawyer asked Judge Pratt to appoint a referee to ascertain the value of the defendant's property, but his request was denied. On the motion for alimony and counsel fee, Judge Pratt took the papers and reserved de-
